

Woyane Shamed in Melbourne/Australia/

Woyane's Ambassador planned meeting for Ethiopians in Melbourne was disrupted and called off by Victorian police and authorities; after a successful protest.

The protest was attended by about 300 people from various ethnic groups and political organizations of Ethiopians. It was held, in front of the entry and around the church hall on Hyde street in Footscray city. Patriotic Ethiopians, Oromiffa and Somaligna speaking residents converged on the place, well before the meeting started and effectively forced the officials to call it off, to the delight of many who showed unprecedented solidarity against the woyane regime's propaganda attempt in Melbourne. The Ambassador, the so called parliamentarians and representatives of ethnic states in Woyane's administrative regions never showed up.

The woyane members who are residents of Australia and their few teletafis were scared, panicked and frustrated when they were faced with unexpected resistance so overwhelming and powerful to challenge. The protesters paraded different anti-woyane placards and voiced out loud their slogans.

There were a good number of the Victorian and Australian press and media along side the police force that managed to keep the protest from overflowing and endangering the outnumbered woyanes around the venue.

Woyane's Ambassador planned meeting for Ethiopians in Melbourne was disrupted and called off by Victorian police and authorities; after a successful protest.

The protest was attended by about 300 people from various ethnic groups and political organizations of Ethiopians. It was held, in front of the entry and around the church hall on Hyde Street, in Footscray city. Patriotic Ethiopians, Oromiffa and Somaligna speaking residents converged on the place, well before the meeting started and effectively forced the officials to call it off, to the delight of many who showed unprecedented solidarity against the woyane regime's propaganda attempt in Melbourne. The Ambassador, the so called parliamentarians and representatives of ethnic states in Woyane's administrative regions never showed up. The woyane members who are residents of Australia and their few teletafis were scared, panicked and frustrated when they were faced with unexpected resistance so overwhelming and powerful to challenge. The protesters paraded different anti-woyane placards and voiced out loud their slogans.

There were a good number of the Victorian and Australian press and media along side the police force that managed to keep the protest from overflowing and endangering the outnumbered woyanes around the venue.